Music by J.P. Ludebuehl, 1910; Lyrics by V.H. Bell, 1905; Music arranged and copyrighted by David M. Battles 2007.

I.

Away down south in Dixieland,
Where sunsets born in splendor grand,
Where Warrior rolls its tranquil stream,
Softly murmuring as in a dream.
The shade of thy walls, oh U of A,
Has kissed those waters many a day.
And now they sing this echo song
Full from the hearts of students strong.

Then here's to the colors of Crimson White,
Those cords that bind us to truth and right;
Here Hope and Faith give strength each day,
For we love thy walls, of U of A!

II.

And when in years our hearts less strong,
We've fought life's fight the whole way long,
When laurels shall crown our chestnut brow,
Will we love thee as we do now?
A thousand voices ring out ayes.
We'll love thee more in our Winter days.
And all the fame that time will bring,
Greater praise to thee we'll sing.

Then here's to the colors of Crimson White,
Those cords that bind us to truth and right;
Here Hope and Faith give strength each day,
For we love thy walls, of U of A!
